

Brother Ade Oguntoye brings more than 10 years of management, fundraising and program development in nonprofit settings to the greater Atlanta community. As executive director of One World Link, he secures funding, recruits volunteer, and develops partnerships. He also is manager of the Feed My Sheep program which recruits volunteers and distributes meals to those in need.

Ade is one who reaches out to others, bringing them together for a common, good cause. As a program director at Georgia State University, he secured over $800,000 in federal funding to begin two educational and environmental programs for the Alonzo Crim Center for Urban Educational Excellence. He supervised 27 staff members who implemented the curriculum and served as co-facilitator of DREAMS summer program which engages 100 youth in cultural rites of passage training.

He has served as a consultant for Habitat For Humanity and is well known for his work with Americorps. At Americorps, Ade developed the Creating Pride AmeriCorps volunteer program and had direct oversight of 10, full-time volunteers in educational planning, arts integration, and after school management.

When one speaks of Hands on Atlanta, Ade's name will soon enter the conversation. As Hands on Atlanta Elementary and Middle Schools Program Manager, Ade guided more than 60 AmeriCorps volunteer members at 17 Atlanta Public School system sites for more than two school years.

Here at the Pan African Orthodox Christian Church, brother Ade serves as chairperson of the Pan African Ministry and was a key organizer of the ministry's travel to South Africa. Brother Ade recently returned from Liberia where he worshipped with and brought back news from our sister church in Paynesville, Monrovia.

Brother Ade holds a Master's of Science degree in Social Work/Social Policy, a dual degree in Economics and Psychology, and holds a Certified Volunteer Management degree. He brings his gifts and skills to the Pan African World and other communities seeking justice, equity, and compassion for all.